Saddam Officially Charged

Will be tried with 3 others for 1982 massacre of Shiites

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Saddam Hussein and three others will stand trial in the 1982 massacre of Shiite villagers north of Baghdad, a senior judge announced Sunday. It is the first criminal case brought against the ousted leader.

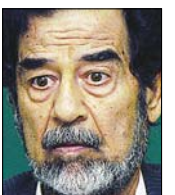

Raid Juhi, chief judge of the Iraq Special Tribunal, said the preliminary investigation into the massacre has been completed and the case referred to the courts for trial. The step roughly corresponds to an indictment in the U.S. legal system.

The date for the trial of Saddam and three others was expected to be determined in "the coming days," Juhi said. If convicted, the four could face the death penalty.

On July 8, 1982, Saddam's security forces massacred about 150 people in the Shiite village of Dujail after the president narrowly escaped assassination, Juhi said.

Some U.S. officials have urged the Iraqis to proceed carefully in prosecuting Saddam for fear a trial could further enflame tensions at a time the Shiite-led government is trying to lure Sunnis away from the insurgency.

Those overtures have been impeded by a sharp rise in suicide bombings, which have taken a toll on Iraqi civilians. More than 60 people have died in Baghdad alone since Friday. BASSEM MROUE (AP)

HITCHING | Dumb and Thumber A woman who tried to hitch a ride from a police officer in Santa Fe, Calif., got a ride to jail instead. Police said Melissa Chavez waived down an officer Wednesday, and the officer conducted a warrant inquiry. Authorities said the inquiry showed Chavez had an outstanding warrant for failure to comply with provisions of a prior charge of criminal damage to property. The officer took her to jail, where she was booked and bond was set at $500. (AP) EyeOpeners | Page 2

EMPLOYEE DISCOUNTS

On Sale Until I Buy It All

Police detained the meat manager of a Kecskernet, Hungary, supermarket after he allegedly told staff to drastically lower the price of beef tenderloin — then told his wife to come in and buy 47 pounds of it. The manager is accused of telling staff, without a supervisor's approval, to put the tenderloin on sale for $1.99 a pound, instead of the usual price of $6.30 a pound. A few hours later, the manager's wife showed up and tried to buy the beef at the discounted price. A cashier, aware the meat wasn't on sale, told security guards, who called the police. The manager was held on suspicion of fraud. (AP)

PRANKS

May Be Responsible For Lost-Cat Posters

Posters for a missing king cobra alarmed Pompton Plains, N.J., residents, leaving a prankster charged with disorderly conduct, North Jersey Media News Service reported. Police received a phone call Tuesday about a sign asking for information about a missing king cobra, said to be lost since July 6, that answered to "Fang" or "King Fangson." Further investigation turned up more than a dozen such posters, offering a cash reward and warning that "Fang" was dangerous when provoked. Police called the number listed; the man at the other end of the line knew nothing of the posters but said it was likely a prank by a friend. His buddy was arrested. (EXPRESS)

The Lower Keys Underwater Music Festival in Big Pine Key, Fla., accomplished two goals Saturday with its 6-hour broadcast: giving more than 250 divers and snorkelers the chance to listen from special underwater speakers and annoying the bejesus out of marine life. A diving group, from left, of Alicia Merel, Martha Puckett, Mary Thomas and Bob Rowand also joined in the quote-fun-unquote by pretending to play these musical-instrument-like sculptures. Living the Dream

Pittsburgh police have flagged a man for an illegal quarterback sneak. Brian Jackson was charged Friday with dating two women while pretending to be Pittsburgh Steelers quarterbacks Ben Roethlisberger and Brian St. Pierre. In the most recent scam, Jackson took one woman on a date July 6 and pretended to be Roethlisberger, giving her an autographed football and ruining a $75 Steelers jersey owned by one of the women's neighbors when he signed his worthless rendition of Roethlisberger's autograph on it, authorities said. She later learned from the neighbor that the man wasn't Roethlisberger. (AP)

Cooper: Libby Was a Source

Time reporter says he spoke with Cheney aide about CIA story

WASHINGTON | The vice president's chief of staff, Lewis Libby, was a source along with the president's chief political adviser for a Time story that identified a CIA officer, the magazine reporter said Sunday, further countering White House claims that neither aide was involved in the leak.

In an effort to quell a chorus of calls to fire deputy White House chief of staff Karl Rove, Republicans said that Rove originally learned about Valerie Plame's identity from the news media. That exonerates Rove, the Republican Party chairman said, and Democrats should apologize.

But it is not clear that it was a journalist who first revealed the information to Rove.

A lawyer familiar with Rove's grand jury testimony said Sunday that Rove learned about the CIA officer either from the media or from someone in government who said the information came from a journalist. The lawyer spoke on condition of anonymity because the federal investigation is continuing.

In a first-person account in the latest issue of Time magazine, reporter Matt Cooper wrote that during his grand jury appearance last Wednesday, prosecutor Patrick Fitzgerald "asked me several different ways if Rove had indicated how he had heard that Plame worked at the CIA." Cooper said Rove did not indicate how he had heard.

Until last week, the White House had insisted for nearly two years that Time magazine's Matt Cooper, left, on NBC's "Meet the Press" on Sunday.

Libby and Rove had no connection to the leak. Plame's husband is Bush administration critic Joseph Wilson, the top U.S. diplomat in Iraq at the start of the Persian Gulf War.

The White House refused last week to repeat its denials about Rove's involvement and on Sunday declined to comment about Libby, saying the investigation was ongoing. (AP)

Senate May Vote on Native Hawaiians

HONOLULU | After six years of trying, Sen. Daniel Akaka hopes to finally see a vote in the Senate this week on one of the hardest-fought measures of his congressional career — his bill to grant his fellow Native Hawaiians federal recognition.

"It will have a historical impact," said Akaka, D-Hawaii. "It affects Hawaii, the Pacific, the nation."

The measure is tentatively scheduled for debate Monday night and Tuesday, with a vote on Wednesday. Akaka and Hawaii's other Democratic senator, Daniel Inouye, say there are enough votes for approval. It would grant Native Hawaiians the same rights of self-government enjoyed by American Indians and Native Alaskans, and would lead to U.S. recognition of a native governing entity.

The bill has the support of Hawaii's Democratic and Republican leaders of all races. (AP)

Medicaid a Focus at Governors' Summit

DES MOINES, IOWA | Governors united Sunday on sweeping Medicaid changes that could help President Bush's budget goals, even as more than a dozen of the chief executives are weighing a legal fight over new Medicare policy that will cost states hundreds of millions of dollars.

The focus at the governors' summer meeting on the two huge, government-paid health care programs — Medicare for the elderly, Medicaid for the poor — underscored their widespread view that health care is their most urgent issue.

Their concerns about Medicare centered on a relatively small portion of Bush's huge new drug prescription policy that would affect elderly who are poor enough to qualify for Medicaid and old enough to qualify for Medicare.

Governors have long argued that the federal government should pay the costs of that group. (AP)

Bomb Victim to Confront Rudolph

Woman injured in 1998 blast to speak at bomber's sentencing

BIRMINGHAM, ALA. | Emily Lyons, critically injured in a 1998 blast outside a Birmingham abortion clinic, has a message for confessed bomber Eric Rudolph: His crimes only made her stronger.

"You did not shut the clinic down. You did not shut me down," said Lyons, who planned to testify Monday at Rudolph's sentencing to the first of four life terms for deadly bombings in Birmingham and Atlanta.

Rudolph, who remained defiant when he admitted setting the bombs and has only discussed his reasons for the blasts in written statements, will have his own chance to speak at Monday's sentencing. Defense lawyers didn't return calls seeking comment on whether Rudolph did plan to speak. He also faces sentencing later in Atlanta.

Emily Lyons plans to tell bomber Eric Rudolph his attack made her stronger.

Rudolph, 38, pleaded guilty in April to setting off a remote-controlled bomb that maimed Lyons, a nurse, and killed police officer Robert "Sande" Sanderson outside the New Woman All Women clinic on the morning of Jan. 29, 1998.

Sanderson's wife and son also could make statements at the hearing Monday.

Under a plea agreement that let Rudolph avoid a possible death penalty, Rudolph confessed to the Alabama bombing and to the bombing at the 1996 Atlanta Olympics that killed one woman and injured more than 100. He also admitted setting off bombs at an abortion clinic and gay bar in Atlanta in 1997.

He was captured in May 2003 after more than five years as a fugitive in the mountains of western North Carolina.

Under the agreement, federal judges in Birmingham and Atlanta will sentence him to four life terms without parole. Rudolph's sentencing in Georgia is set for Aug. 22, and victims of the Atlanta bombings will have a chance to speak then.

Lyons was wounded by flying nails and other pieces of shrapnel in the bombing. She has undergone 21 operations, lost her left eye and has visible scars on her arms and legs.

She plans to release her book about the bombing on Monday, her 49th birthday. In the self-published book titled "Life's Been a Blast," Lyons says she is moving on now that Rudolph is bound for life behind bars. JAY REEVES (AP)

The church recently became the first in the United States to average more than 30,000 worshippers weekly. (AP)

Hemings Descendants Gather in Ohio

CHILLICOTHE, OHIO | In their first meeting away from Thomas Jefferson's estate in Virginia, about 65 people who believe they are descendants of the nation's third president Jefferson and slave Sally Hemings gathered for a weekend reunion in southern Ohio.

Two of Hemings' surviving four children, who claimed to be Jefferson's sons, settled in southern Ohio. Hemings' descendants have been trying for years to gain official recognition that Jefferson, the author of the Declaration of Independence, fathered at least some of Hemings' children.

Their argument was bolstered in 1998, when DNA tests found that a male in Jefferson's family fathered Hemings' last child, Eston. Some Jefferson family members, however, dispute Hemings family ties to the third president and have refused them membership in the family's exclusive Monticello Association. (AP)

More Violence Hammers Baghdad

Fresh attacks kill 22, death toll in mosque attack rises past 90

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Suicide bombers killed 22 people in the Baghdad area Sunday, as insurgents stepped up a relentless campaign that claimed more than 90 lives a night before in a horrific bombing near a Shiite mosque south of the capital.

The U.S. military announced that three American soldiers also died in separate attacks over the weekend.

In the past week alone, at least 170 people were killed in suicide bomb attacks throughout Iraq.

One car bomber Sunday struck the offices of Iraq's electoral commission in eastern Baghdad, killing five election employees and one policeman. In another suicide attack, insurgents dumped two bodies on the road, then struck police who stopped to inspect them, the U.S. military said. Two policemen and one civilian were killed and eight people wounded in the explosion.

The U.S. command said Sunday that three soldiers were killed in bombings, including one soldier in Iskandariyah and another near Kirkuk. A third soldier was killed near Balad.

The weekend's most devastating attack occurred in Musayyib, where a suicide bombing ignited a fuel truck in front of a Shiite mosque as thousands were walking nearby or heading for sunset prayers.

The Iraqi government reported Sunday that the death toll stood at "more than 90," and hospital officials said more than 150 were injured. It was the second deadliest single bombing strike since the Saddam Hussein was driven from power in April 2003. ANTONIO CASTANEDA (AP)

AL-SADR SPEAKS

● A RADICAL Shiite cleric who led two major uprisings against American forces in Iraq last year called for his countrymen to exercise self-restraint and avoid violence, according to a transcript of a BBC interview to be broadcast Monday. Muqtada al-Sadr condemned the U.S. presence in Iraq, but said Iraqis should not be provoked into violence. "(I believe) America does not want confrontation. So I call upon other parties like the Iraqi army, and the Iraqi police, to exercise self-restraint with Iraqi people and not be provoked into confrontation with them or the occupying forces as this isn't in the interest of Iraq," al-Sadr said. Sunnis in Britain Issue Edict Against Bombings

Muslim group speaks out on transit attacks as probe continues

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND | As the investigation continues into the deadly attacks on the London transport system, Britain's largest Sunni Muslim group on Sunday issued a binding religious edict, a fatwa, condemning the July 7 suicide bombings as the work of a "perverted ideology."

In Birmingham, Jama'at e Ahl e Sunnat, or the Sunni Council, said the bombings were against Islam, adding that any type of suicide attack was against the Koran.

The fatwa came as investigators in the city of Leeds continued searching an Islamic shop and a house near the home of one of the four alleged bombers, 22-year-old Shahzad Tanweer.

Additionally, The Sunday Times reported that another suspected attacker, 30-year-old Mohammad Sidique Khan, was scrutinized last year by MI5, Britain's domestic secret service, but was not regarded as a threat to national security or put under surveillance. (AP)

Plane Crashes in Equatorial Guinea

MALABO, EQUATORIAL GUINEA | A Russian-made plane believed carrying more than 50 passengers and crew crashed in a forest in Equatorial Guinea, killing all aboard with searchers reporting that some bodies were scattered in trees, officials said Sunday.

A rescue team including soldiers and Red Cross workers arrived at the crash site to find the fuselage crumpled and corpses strewn on the ground and in nearby trees.

Some of the bodies were burned beyond recognition, the Red Cross said. (AP)

Resort Bomb Planted, Not Caused by Suicide Attacker

A Turkish official said Sunday that a package bomb — not a suicide attacker — caused an explosion that killed five people a day earlier at a popular resort on the Aegean coast. Authorities stepped up security at resorts to try to prevent a repeat of Saturday's blast, whose victims included a British woman and an Irish teenager, officials said. Bomb experts completed on-scene investigations in the beach town of Kusadasi and returned to Ankara, the Turkish capital, to evaluate the evidence, Aydin province Governor Mustafa Malay said. (AP)

Tourists Flee Emily's Path

Powerful hurricane sets course for Cancun, triggering evacuations

CANCUN, MEXICO | The outer winds of Hurricane Emily lashed the beaches of Cancun on Sunday as thousands of jittery tourists sought shelter inside schools and gymnasiums in a Caribbean resort better known for its emerald waters and discos.

The Category 4 storm, which sideswiped Jamaica before setting course for Mexico, was expected to land near Cancun Sunday night or early Monday.

A fleet of buses was moving 30,000 tourists in Cancun to temporary shelters, while 70,000 to 80,000 more people were being evacuated statewide.

Hundreds of tourists clutching pillows waded out of hotels on Sunday morning, boarding buses bound for safer ground.

Tourism and hotel officials had HIGHER GROUND: Tourists wait outside their hotel to be taken to temporary shelters in Cancun, Mexico, on Sunday as Hurricane Emily threatened the resort area.

said tourists would be relocated to ballrooms and convention centers in well-protected hotels, but the first wave of evacuees was ferried to gymnasiums and schools.

Hundreds of mostly foreign tourists lay on thin foam pads in a sweltering gymnasium near the center of Cancun. "It's hot in here," said Beth McGhee, 46, of Independence, Mo. "We feel like we've been kept in the dark until this morning. But we're safe, and that's what's important."

Israel Threatens Gaza Invasion Over Attacks

JERUSALEM | Israel threatened Sunday to invade Gaza if Palestinian leader Mahmoud Abbas does not control militants who have stepped up rocket and mortar attacks ahead of Israel's planned pullout from the coastal strip next month.

Abbas pledged to do his utmost to stop the barrages but warned that an invasion of Gaza would "sabotage everything."

Prime Minister Ariel Sharon said all restraints are off and thousands of Israeli troops have massed along the Gaza border. The sudden escalation is the most serious threat yet to a 5-month-old truce that had drastically reduced Palestinian-Israeli violence after more than four years of bloodshed.

More than 100 rockets and mortars have rained down on Gaza settlements and Israeli villages just outside the territory in the last four days. Hamas leaders say the attacks are retaliation for Israeli violations of the truce.

Rocket attacks, such as the one that hit this car in Gaza, are raising tensions.

In violence Sunday, Israeli soldiers killed a Hamas leader and Palestinian infiltrator, and the air force fired on a car in northern Gaza, wounding a bystander. The military said it targeted militants in the strike, but missed.

Indonesia, Aceh Rebels to Sign Peace Agreement

HELSINKI, FINLAND | The Indonesian government and Aceh rebels agreed Sunday to sign a formal peace agreement next month, vowing to end a 29-year conflict that has killed 15,000 people in the tsunami-ravaged province.

The peace deal is to be signed Aug. 15 in Helsinki, the two sides said after finishing the final round of talks in the Finnish capital.

Aceh, once a fiercely independent sultanate, was invaded in 1870 by the Dutch, who attached it to their East Indies colony, which gained independence as Indonesia in 1949. The result was almost constant warfare, as guerrillas battled the Dutch, Japanese invaders and later Indonesian rule.

The latest hostilities broke out in 1976. Although many Acehnese want peace, there has been support for independence because of abuses by Indonesian security forces. (AP)

For '06, Traffic Is Top Agenda Item

Kilgore, Kaine agree that Va.'s traffic woes must be addressed

MCLEAN, VA. | When it comes to resolving gridlock in a region ranked third nationally for traffic problems, the candidates for governor are riding in the same vehicle — at least along part of the road. They agree traffic threatens Northern Virginia's economic development.

"It's critical. The next governor is going to have to move decisively and quickly," said Republican Jerry Kilgore.

Kaine

Lt. Gov. Timothy Kaine, the Democratic nominee, agrees the problem has been a lack of leadership, saying growth in Northern Virginia got ahead of planning.

Both candidates want to put the trust back in the state's transportation trust fund with a constitutional amendment to protect it from legislative raids.

And while neither candidate wants to levy any new taxes for transportation, Kilgore is willing to let residents decide.

He proposes giving the Northern Virginia Transportation Commission the power to identify transportation priorities and propose taxes to pay for them. Voters would then decide in a referendum.

Tucker Martin, a Kilgore spokesman, said Northern Virginia voters rejected a half-cent sales tax increase for transportation projects in 2002 because they didn't trust Richmond with the money.

Martin admitted that pushing through a constitutional amendment that would bypass Richmond would take years. Kilgore vows to veto any budget that tries to make the money come through Richmond.

But John McClain, deputy director of the Center for Regional Analysis at George Mason University, isn't impressed with either candidate. "They're talking to the issue, but they're not putting something out there to get it done," he said. HEATHER GREENFIELD (AP)

Weekend Wilson Work Wraps Up 24 Hours Early

ALEXANDRIA, VA. | Construction crews reopened all three north-bound lanes of the Capital Beltway near the Woodrow Wilson Bridge on Sunday — nearly 24 hours early.

Detours at the major span linking Virginia and Maryland were taken down by 6 a.m. Sunday because the project required less paving than expected, said Wilson Bridge Project spokesman John Undeland. Two of the three lanes on the Outer Loop were closed Friday night at Route 1 so workers could align new lanes of the Beltway with the new bridge. (AP)

Steele: Exclusive Club Should Change Ways

BALTIMORE | In a change of course, Maryland's lieutenant governor says he understands the anger of blacks and other minorities at the membership practices at the all-white Elkridge Club, saying that the club should reconsider its policies.

Michael Steele, the state's first black lieutenant governor who is eying a run for Maryland's opening Senate seat in 2006, spoke Saturday to WBAL radio about the criticism surrounding a June 20 fund-raiser that Republican Gov. Robert Ehrlich held at the exclusive Baltimore club, raising $100,000 for the re-election bid.

"With Elkridge, the core issue there is the perception of discrimination is just as insidious as the reality of discrimination, so we need to tackle it on all fronts," Steele said.

The fund-raiser drew strong criticism from black leaders, some of whom pointed out that Ehrlich attended an event at a club where Steele wouldn't be welcomed.

The comments mark a change from the initial remarks from Ehrlich, who called the flap "all a bunch of nothing." (AP)

Media industry hurries to catch up with boom in Internet 'broadcasts'

BIGFOOTING | The runaway popularity of blogging, which has turned everyday people into online news outlets, caught the media establishment off guard. The industry is trying not to make the same mistake with podcasting — which lets nearly anyone “broadcast” on the Internet.

Everyone from Disney to Newsweek to National Public Radio is now offering podcasts, and Apple Computer, Inc. last month made it a whole lot easier to find them and download them to iPods.

While profits remain elusive, there's a bigger prize out there — the company that manages to become the go-to Web site for podcasts could gain enough leverage to strike favorable deals with proven content providers, and generate cash by charging for subscriptions and advertising.

Podcasts are recorded audio files, distributed via Internet download. They can be stored on computers or digital music players and played back whenever the listener chooses. Like bloggers, podcasters can sound off on whatever they please — from politics and religion to gladiolas and glass-blowing.

If anyone is positioned to win big on podcasting, it's Apple, which added an iPod directory that features more than 3,000 podcasts to the company's iTunes music-download site on June 28.

But it had better act fast.

NPR is negotiating with the music industry for podcasting rights as are other media companies, according to Ruth Seymour, whose Los Angeles-based station, KCRW, receives some of its programming from NPR.

She is eager for such a deal. Without one, KCRW is prevented from recording podcasts for shows that include music.

“The explosion for podcasting hasn't happened yet,” said Seymour. “It takes off the second that someone gets the music rights.”

LIVE ONLINE

Fast Forward

Washington Post columnist ROB PEGORARO was online last week to discuss password management. | washingtonpost.com/liveonline

In terms of password length and use of case-sensitive alphanumeric combinations, what is an example of a secure but user-friendly password format?

It depends mainly on what you're trying to secure. Like, the password I use at newspaper sites is boringly obvious, so I don't have to think about what it is. But my bank and credit-card accounts have different, non-obvious passwords that aren't based on words you should find in the average dictionary. Once you can't remember the password and have to write it down on a Post-It note on the monitor, you've made yourself less secure.

Security for financial transactions is my major concern on the Internet. A browser will display a lock icon to indicate that communication over the Internet is encrypted. However, I assume that one is still not totally protected. What is one to do?

Defend your computer. If you use a Mac or Linux, be choosy about the third-party software you install, especially if it requires admin or root access. If you use Windows, the same applies, and you also need to apply every security patch available and keep your anti-virus and anti-spyware software up-to-date.

Getting in Just Got Harder at Bank's Web Site

SECURITY | Bank of America Corp. is rolling out a new security system aimed at thwarting efforts by online crooks to access its customers' accounts. Passwords will no longer be enough.

With SiteKey, bank customers pick three challenge questions — things only the customer would know, such as the year and model of the customer's first car — and provide them with the traditional password to log on.

Bank of America is rolling out SiteKey this week in Virginia, Maryland and the District. (AP)

Nats Suffer 7th Loss In 9 to Ex-Teammate

Drese bounced out in third; Brewers take three of 4-game series

BASEBALL | Tomo Ohka pitched seven strong innings against his former team, leading the Milwaukee Brewers over the Washington Nationals 5-3 on Sunday.

Ohka (6-4), acquired by Milwaukee for infielder Junior Spivey on June 10, picked up his first win since his Brewers' debut on June 14. He allowed four hits and three runs, struck out six and did not walk a batter in just his second career victory in 13 July starts. Derrick Turnbow pitched a perfect ninth for his 19th save.

Geoff Jenkins hit a two-run double, and Russell Branyan and Chad Moeller each added RBI singles for the Brewers, who won for the fifth time in six games.

Washington, which lost for the seventh time in nine games, got a solo home run from Jose Guillen and a two-run double from Brian Schneider. Washington starter Ryan Drese (3-2), 2-0 in his previous three starts, lasted just three innings. He allowed five hits and three runs.

After Guillen's 19th homer gave Washington a 1-0 lead in the first, Jenkins extended his hitting streak to 10 games with a two-run double in the bottom of the inning and scored off a Bill Lane grounder.

Milwaukee increased its lead to 5-1 in the third, as Rickie Weeks scored in a groundout, Branyan knocked in a run and Moeller extended his hitting streak to a career-high 10 games with another RBI single.

In the seventh, Schneider drove in two runs with a double. (AP)

Bill Hall scored when Geoff Jenkins got his hitting streak to 10 games.

TOO CLOSE FOR COMFORT

The Nationals have given fans their fair share of suspense. Now it's time to win some games.

- Sixteen of Washington's last 17 games have been decided by two runs or less.
- The Nationals have scored more than four runs just twice in their last 11 games.
- So far this July, Washington has already lost four one-run games. The Nationals haven't lost more than four one-run games in any month this season.

- Outfielder Jose Guillen hit his 19th home run of the season — and his 17th away from home. That's the most in the league.
- Starting pitcher Ryan Drese hasn't given up a home run in the past 34 innings.

The field of left-behinds at the British Open on Sunday was reminded that kissing majors trophies are what Tigers do best.

Tiger, Just Like 'Old' Times

British Open's Old Course all Woods ... again

GOLF | Sunday brought yet another grand crossing over the Swilcan Bridge. The defiant return of Tiger Woods.

Two days after Jack Nicklaus bade an emotional farewell to the majors, Woods took another step toward the Golden Bear's record with another ruthless performance at St. Andrews, closing with a 2-under 70 to win the British Open for his 10th career major.

He won by five shots, the largest margin in any major since Woods won by eight at St. Andrews five years ago. This one also had a sense of inevitability, with Woods taking the lead on the ninth hole of the first round. No one caught him over the final 63.

He joined Nicklaus as the only other player to win the career Grand Slam twice, and Woods completed his own version of the slam that shows how their careers are so indelibly linked — he now has won all four majors that Nicklaus played for the last time.

It was Woods' second major in four months, restoring a dominance that had been missing the last few years. Even after he won the Masters in a playoff, there were questions about whether he could blow away the competition the way he did when he captured seven out of 11 majors.

But that's exactly what happened on the Old Course.

Woods was challenged briefly

Taylor, Hopkins Prepare for Rematch

BOXING | After taking away Bernard Hopkins' undisputed middleweight title with a split decision, Jermain Taylor wants a rematch as much as Hopkins does.

And with a contract clause guaranteeing a rematch, both boxers can plan on it. Hopkins, 40, plans to fight only two more times — and now desperately wants one of those bouts to be for the belts he surrendered on Saturday to the 26-year-old.

“He deserves that rematch and the same thing is going to happen,” Taylor, whose record is 24-0, said. “It's just going to be easier.”

It couldn't be much more difficult. Taylor began well, but Hopkins came on midway through and dominated the late rounds. Had judge Duane Ford given the final round to Hopkins instead of Taylor, it would have been a draw; the other two judges scored it for Hopkins.

“He's a smart fighter. In the rematch, I've got to plan for that,” said Taylor.

Hopkins, whose record streak of 20 straight successful title defenses was snapped, is directing people to the tape from Saturday's match.

“Technology today can give you the benefit of the doubt to go back and reflect,” Hopkins said.

Errors give Mariners extra chances in 8-2 win to split the series

ORIOLES | Gil Meche became Seattle's first 10-game winner in two seasons and Miguel Olivo hit a solo home run as the Mariners beat the mistake-prone Baltimore Orioles 8-2 on Sunday.

Seattle blew it open with a five-run sixth inning, highlighted by Mike Morse's two-run bloop single with two outs and the bases loaded. The Mariners sent 17 batters to the plate through the first five innings, then 18 over the next two, earning a split of the four-game series.

Meche (10-6) won for the fifth time in his last seven starts to rekindle memories of 2003, when he won 15 games. He worked 6 2/3 innings, allowing one run and five hits with one strikeout and four walks.

Two days after collecting his 3,000th career hit, Rafael Orioles starting pitcher Sidney Ponson was masterful Sunday — at least through five innings. After that, Seattle smacked him around the batting order for five runs.

Palmeiro led off the second with his 567th career home run, tying Al Simmons for No. 15 all-time with 1,827 RBIs. It was Palmeiro's 52nd homer against Seattle, more than any other hitter.

But it wasn't nearly enough offense for Baltimore, which collapsed after Sidney Ponson (7-8) looked masterful through the first five innings.

Ponson retired 10 of the first 13 hitters until Seattle roughed him up in the sixth, batting around for a 5-1 lead on four hits, after the bases were empty with one out. Richie Sexson, Ichiro Suzuki and Javy Lopez also had RBIs in the inning.

Ponson worked 5 2/3 innings, allowing five runs and six hits with three strikeouts and three walks — one intentional.

Seattle stretched the lead to 7-1 with two unearned runs in the seventh.

Reliever Todd Williams fell while trying to field a nubber by Randy Winn. Raul Ibanez then grounded a potential double-play ball through the legs of All-Star game MVP Miguel Tejada, who was charged with an error. Sexson hit a sacrifice fly and Jeremy Reed singled in a run.

Lance's Buddy Gets Stage Win

Hincapie's first victory on Tour; Armstrong finishes ahead of rivals

CYCLING | Taking care of business, Armstrong solidified his overall race lead Sunday in the brutal 15th stage — staying on track to retire with a seventh consecutive Tour victory next Sunday.

But it was his teammate George Hincapie of New York, his best friend on the team, who pedaled to victory high in the Pyrenees, becoming the first of Armstrong's support riders, and the eighth American, to win an individual Tour stage.

"This is a dream for me," the 32-year-old Hincapie said. "I'm really in a state of shock."

In the 127.7-mile trek from Lezat-sur-Leze, with six mountain climbs, Hincapie joined a group of riders that broke away from the main pack, which included Armstrong.

Hincapie and Oscar Pereiro, having shaken off the rest of their group, fought for the victory alone on the final and hardest climb to Pla d'Adet.

CHRISTOPHE ENA/AP

Hincapie has helped Armstrong win six Tours, but he had never won a stage.

There, Hincapie beat the Spaniard with a sprint finish, shaking his head in disbelief as he crossed the line.

Hincapie is the only one of Armstrong's eight teammates to have been with the Texan for all of his six Tour victories.

"To win a stage like this which is arguably the hardest stage of the Tour is a big, big accomplishment," Armstrong said. JOHN LEICESTER (AP)

HEY, WHERE'D EVERYBODY GO?

Coming into the Pyrenees, Lance was leading, but barely. Now he leads his closest competitor by almost three minutes. Where is everybody else?

- Ivan Basso promised to attack in the Pyrenees, and did. He was the only rider who could keep up, and he moved into second place.
- Mickeal Rasmussen lost another minute and a half to Armstrong on Sunday and fell into third — 3:09 off the pace.

- Jan Ullrich finished 1:24 back and is now six minutes behind Lance.
- Francisco Mancebo finished with Rasmussen, and is now comfortably in fifth — 6:31 back.

SWEET PAYOFF: Viewers binged on "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory" this weekend. The remake starring Johnny Depp attracted audiences — despite the lure of curling up all weekend with the new "Harry Potter" — to the tune of a yummy $55.4 million.

BIG KID: Thornton's certain something — something that probably smells of gin — made him right for "The Bad News Bears."

He's Bad News

Billy Bob Thornton brings his shabby charm to a kids' movie

COACHING | Billy Bob Thornton has effectively brought the drunk, foul-mouthed Kriss Kringle of his "Bad Santa" to the baseball diamond.

In the remake of the 1976 sandlot classic "Bad News Bears," Thornton leads a team of young misfits, imparting wisdom about the national pastime such as: "You can love it, but it don't always love you back — kinda like dating a German chick."

Again teaming up with the screenwriters of "Bad Santa," Thornton has discovered that people like to watch him drink beers and cuss — especially when kids are around. Turning 50 Aug. 4, the actor finds himself looking back at a career he says is, in musical terms, about "albums, not singles."

You were a ball player yourself, weren't you?

I was a junk pitcher. I had a lot of pitches. I had a good curve ball, a really good slider. That was my best pitch. I wasn't considered a fireballer.

Was your baseball history what drew you to "Bad News Bears"?

Well, I love the original. I think it was a great opportunity to remake a movie that a lot of teenagers might never see the original. The movie's got a great message. Plus, I seemed kind of a natural to play a drunk ...

Are you still much of a partier?

Not much. For several years, I've been pretty much a hermit. If you looked in magazines ... you never see me in those out-on-the-town pages. I'm either at home playing with the kids or I'm working.

You seem to be making the reluctant hero outright catatonic — literally passed-out, even.

I play guys that on the surface are not as smart or not as compassionate, and by the end, in fact, it's the guy with the conscience. I find them more interesting. To play that sort of straight across-the-board hero guy, the sort of top actor guy roles, they just don't interest me because they're kind of the same person at the end of the movie that they were at the beginning.

You haven't directed a movie for five years. Do you think about doing it again?

When you're a director, for two years or at least a year and a half, that's what your life is. So if you're gonna do it ... it has to be something you care about. I've found something that I do care about. It's not something that I can say anything about now. It wouldn't be until next year.

Giraffes: Standing Tall

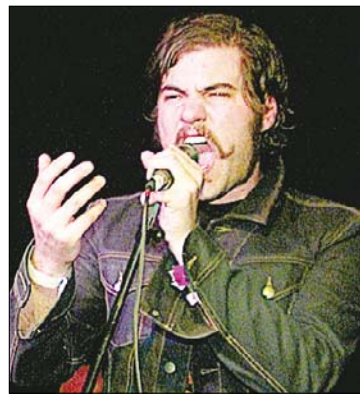

Brooklyn's weirdest metal ironists live to bellow another day

MUSIC | The Giraffes' self-titled debut (Razor & Tie) would've been little more than a post-mortem tribute had lead singer Aaron Lazar died on a New York street after his heart failed early this year.

But he lived, and metal and irony abound on the cocksure Brooklyn rockers' first label effort.

There's the alternately rumbling and riffy "Million $ Man," written years before Lazar's heart-related hospital bills were projected to reach seven figures. There's the former chain-smoking frontman coughing uncontrollably after belting out "Having Fun," a catchy autobiographical anthem about hanging out with, um, jerks. And there's Lazar vowing to send a soccer fan home in an ambulance on "Man U."

Bassist John Rosenthal and Lazar cuts loose at a frantic live show.

drummer Drew Totolos hold the songs together so skillfully that Lazar and guitarist Damien Paris can run amok, howling and shredding recklessly at will.

"BlekNtWhtCstl" is based on a band member's brush with death outside of the burger chain. It's driven by Lazar's backyard carny-like bellowing: "Step right up to the stage, ladies and gentlemen!/Boys and girls!/Come one, come all!"

Their sense of humor is also evident on "Wage Earner," a quick, sarcastic punk-rock spanking delivered to a buddy who quit his band to get a job. Here's hoping the Giraffes never have to follow suit. MATTHEW OTT (AP)

Not Just for Playgrounds

The sport of many childhood tears gets an adult makeover

VENGEANCE | Jeremiah Trotter needs another rubdown. Lately the pro football star been on the massage table more than he ever has in his career. But pain happens when you're playing "Extreme Dodgeball."

"Those balls hurt when they hit you — especially if you get hit in the face," said Trotter, soaked in sweat after his third game of the day.

And there's still game four.

"That's a lot when you're out there moving and jerking. Especially throwing. I throw hard," the Philadelphia Eagles linebacker said, "and that takes a toll on your arm. I skinned my knee yesterday dodging for a ball, but that's the nature of the sport."

In this third season of GSN's "Extreme Dodgeball," premiering Tuesday night at 10 p.m., the game with roots on playgrounds veers from its first season as a comedic farce — where sumo wrestlers pummeled jockeys — into real hit-and-run sports action.

On the court, each team is headed by a celebrity captain. The top four teams will go on to the playoffs, vying for a championship purse of $170,000.

The first competition bounces off with actor Mario Lopez leading the L.A. Armed Response against the Denver Hurlers and snowboard champion Tara Dakides. Later, "Queer as Folk" star Hal Sparks and his Chicago Hitmen go up against Trotter's Philadelphia Benjamins, who then go toe-to-toe with volleyball gold medallist Kerri Walsh and the Detroit Spoilers, who in turn battle boxer Mia St. John's New York Bling.

The schoolyard game, discouraged in some areas for being too violent, has become an all-out sports craze on college campuses and among adults in recent years.

"Dodgeball is the new softball — it's very social," said GSN President Rich Cronin. "We came up with the idea a year ago when we noticed it was catching on on college campuses. Then we read about the dodgeball movie [starring Ben Stiller and Vince Vaughn] and we thought, 'Great, we will debut our dodgeball series at the same time as the movie. We'll jump on this hot trend of dodgeball as a growing sport [and] help fuel the trend.'"

GSN is looking to expand beyond its older-skewing retro game shows like "Family Feud" by adding other kinds of non-scripted gaming, such as the recently acquired "Amazing Race" and game-related documentaries.

Along with "Extreme Dodgeball," the network will premiere a record 50 original episodes this summer including the billiards show "Ballbreakers," "Poker Royale: Comedians vs. Pros," the documentary "Anything to Win," and the returning series "Lingo" and "Kenny vs. Spenny."

Evil Is as Men Do

James Lee Burke's latest crime novel rages with lyricism

BOOKS | "There is nothing mysterious about human nature," James Lee Burke writes in "Crusader's Cross (Simon & Schuster) — "People are what they do."

Here's what Burke's detective-hero, Dave Robicheaux, does: He loathes wealth and privilege; he asserts the most evil among us are that way by choice; and in fighting these self-made monsters, he erupts into acts of violence so disturbing that he sometimes has to hide from himself inside a bottle of bourbon.

The plot turns on an act of evil that bubbles up from the past — the long-ago disappearance of a teenage hooker with whom Robicheaux's brother, Jimmy, grew infatuated one summer. When her name pops up in a small-town bully's deathbed confession, Robicheaux starts asking questions; and some of those powerful people in business with the devil decide the nosy detective doesn't need to grow any older.

The intrigue and violence unfold in the lyrical style of a writer who can never resist a vivid description of the natural world: "The barometer dropped and the sky turned a chemical green and the breakers were full of sand and dead bait-fish when they smacked on the beach."

Fans who believe Burke's musical prose has earned him a place of honor in the genre will find that "Crusader's Cross" rivals the stunning "In Electric Mist With Confederate Dead" as Burke's finest book. BRUCE DESILVA (AP)

Eat Your Carrots, Kids

Children's cartoon friends are pitching spinach over sweets

GREENS | Skip the Krabby Patty, SpongeBob SquarePants is going veggie.

Pictures of the happy-go-lucky sponge will appear on packages of carrots, spinach and citrus starting next month, under licensing deals with produce companies. Dora the Explorer and other Nickelodeon characters also will debut on fruit and vegetable packages, according to the network.

"If we can use our popular characters and help kids eat better, then we're all for that," said Sherice Torres, vice president of

The invertebrate SpongeBob is now helping his fans build strong bones.

Nickelodeon & Viacom Consumer Products.

The deals come as TV executives are countering criticism they contribute to the childhood obesity boom. A crop of kids' shows try to inspire young viewers to get up off the couch, like "Jo Jo's Circus" on Disney and Nickelodeon's "Lazy Town." Even Sesame Street's Cookie Monster changed his tune earlier this year, singing, "A Cookie Is a Sometimes Food."

Nickelodeon also announced the launch of public-service announcements promoting a balanced breakfast. They will join existing programming that encourages kids to exercise.

SpongeBob will be giving a thumbs-up on bags of spinach. SpongeBob, Dora and "Lazy Town" characters will appear on bags of carrots, and a stable of Nickelodeon characters will adorn bags of oranges, tangerines and clementines.

SpongeBob and Co. are not the first cartoon characters to go wholesome. Clifford the Big Red Dog lent his name to an organic cereal and Arthur the aardvark appears on some products made by Annie's Homegrown.

Some child health advocates grumble that the best way to raise healthy kids is to cut the sweets and turn off the TV.

Nickelodeon public affairs vice president Marva Smalls said that while TV and ice cream are part of kids' lives, the network is using its influence to nudge kids toward a balanced lifestyle: "We're the first to say turn off the TV. We'll be here when you get back." MICHAEL HILL (AP)

A stunning re-run deal make a promise of endless TV love

SYNDICATION | Fans of "Everybody Loves Raymond" have no reason to panic.

Repeats of the show will be on for a long, long time. Last week, TBS announced a deal for the cable rights to "Everybody Loves Raymond" through the year 2016.

No, that's not a typo. Fans will have at least 11 more years to love "Raymond."

But will they? Comedy trends

PLEASE LOVE ME: Ray Romano's face won't be fading from the screen soon.

change and some sitcoms date very quickly. Sure, "The Honeymooners" and "I Love Lucy" seem evergreen, but for every classic there are dozens of shows that seem tied to a very particular era. Did you catch the "Ned and Stacey" reruns that used to run on the Romance Channel before it was WE [Women's Entertainment]?

Turn the clock back 11 years and look at the most popular sitcoms of 1994. Sure, millions still like "Seinfeld." But do they crave endless re-runs of "Home Improvement"? "Grace Under Fire"? "Mad About You"? "Madman of the People"?

It remains to be seen if people will be watching "Raymond" (or television as we now know it) in the year 2016. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Careers

Colonial Sleuth

ELEANOR BREEN, 28

JOB: Assistant archaeologist at Mount Vernon

SALARY: $30,000 to $35,000

EDUCATION: Bachelor's in anthropology from the College of William and Mary, in Williamsburg, Va.; master's in historical archaeology from University of Massachusetts-Boston.

WHAT SHE DOES: Breen seeks a broader understanding of George Washington, and colonial life in general, by digging the dirt at his Mount Vernon estate. For the past three years, she's mostly been unearthing the first president's whiskey distillery, which burned around 1814 and is believed to be one of the largest such operations of the time. (Old George was quite the entrepreneur; booze was another way to profit off the grains he farmed.) Other digs include delving into trash pits, which are "a pretty direct route to learning about everyday life and everyday culture," she said, and produce details "usually too mundane to write down" at the time. Among her coolest trash-pit finds: an iron fork with a decoratively carved animal-bone handle, perhaps used by George himself. Aside from digging, Breen also researches and identifies finds, writes in-house reports and, sometimes, academic articles on the artifacts.

WOULD YOU WANT HER JOB? "Indiana Jones"-style adventure it's not. A dig is a slow process, involving hand shovels, brushes and even dental picks to expose the delicate artifacts. At an excavation, square holes are dug systematically to examine the soil for hints of history, such as brick rubble, then a hole is carefully expanded around an artifact. And you get dirty — "like Pigpen-dirty."

HOW YOU CAN GET HER JOB: You can learn the basics of dig etiquette at a field school, which is an excavation project supervised by a college, museum or other group, including Mount Vernon. There's often a fee to participate, said Breen, but prior training isn't usually needed and the experience can be enough to land an entry-level job. Degrees in archaeology, anthropology or a related field aren't necessary but are helpful.

FOR MORE INFORMATION: The Archaeological Institute of America (archaeological.org) compiles a detailed list of field schools. Find job openings at the Society for American Archaeology (saa.org), the Society for Historical Archaeology (sha.org) and shovelbums.org. DANNY FREEDMAN

Accounting Adds Up to A Hot Future

HOT JOBS | Accounting is suddenly sizzling with potential. Though perhaps not the sexiest 9-to-5, accounting firms have become the new corporate police, following the rash of U.S. business scandals that Enron kicked off four years ago. The company audit has become a crucial task for corporate America, yet Neil Lebovits, president of Ajilon Finance, warns that we're seeing a shortage of certified public accountants.

In 1991, 60,000 students graduated with accounting degrees. Twelve years later, that number had dropped to less than 50,000, according to the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants. (AP)

LIVE ONLINE

Life at Work

AMY JOYCE's column appears Sundays in The Washington Post. She chats every Tuesday at 11 a.m. on washingtonpost.com/liveonline.

There's no easy way to say this, so I'll be blunt. I hate babies. Recently, a few of our new moms have brought their newborns in to work. That's OK. My problem is when they get to my office. Three times now, a co-worker comes in and shows me her kids. But it doesn't end there — they want me to hold the kid or be goofy or something. I don't want to!

Do just what you would if they came in to chat and you didn't have time: "Oh, congrats. What a cutie. I'm sorry, but I really have to get back to work here."

The new intern has been showing a lot of interest in me. She is absolutely stunning and normally my type, but I'm concerned that her interest is in advancement, rather than in me. I'm still leaning against pursuing her because of the risk to my career, but my buddies say I'm being silly. What do you think?

Why don't you try to get to know her beyond "stunning." Then figure out if you want to ask her out. If you're her supervisor, scratch all those thoughts from your brain.

During a recent job interview, when asked for my salary requirements, I gave a number that was $10,000 under my envisioned salary. If I get an offer, is it too late to bargain that number up?

Not too late at all. You're going to really have to negotiate, but that's what the offer time is for. Tell them that you really slipped and felt you under bid yourself. Tell them what you want. It's all you can do now.

New magazines try to cash in on poker's growing popularity

Bluff magazine routinely reveals a world at the top of the poker craze that few get to see, of millionaire card sharks who spend money with abandon, use $1,000 chips as coasters and fly like rock stars from one glitzy casino to another.

But like its name, Bluff's glamorous gloss is all for show. It spins its stories away from the poker mecca of Las Vegas at its Atlanta headquarters, where the most exciting legal gambling experience is scratching off a lottery ticket.

"We're aimed at the new generation of poker players," said Eddy Kleid, Bluff's co-president. "We wanted to make it fun and sexy. We're kind of like a 'Maxim' for poker."

Poker's exploding popularity, with televised Texas hold'em tournaments and Internet games, has created an unprecedented opportunity for magazine publishers — even those far from casinos — looking to cash in on the craze. In the last year, as many as 10 poker magazines have popped up in card rooms, newsstands and stores.

"All of magazine publishing is gambling but when you are gambling on a fad, it's a bigger gamble," warned Samir Husni, chairman of the journalism department at the University of Mississippi.

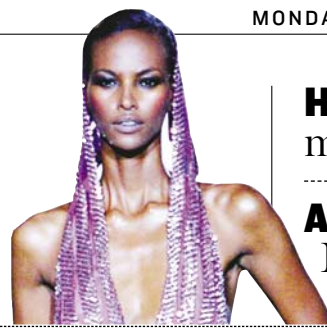

The new poker magazines have caused industry veteran Card Player, based in Las Vegas, to take notice.

"Thanks to all these new poker magazines, it's forced me to come out with a better product," said Jeff Shulman, president and co-publisher of the 150,000-circulation magazine.

The poker magazine industry is flush with new advertising dollars from other companies profiting from the poker craze, including poker Web sites that, although not legal in the United States, can advertise because they're based

In total, poker magazines bring in between $5 million and $10 million in revenue a year, a figure comparable to the yields of specialty magazine markets for triathletes and other hobbyists, Husni said.

None of the most popular magazines, however, are listed with the independent Audit Bureau of Circulation, so there are no reliable readership figures.

Poker has become popular among youth, thanks to TV shows such as Bravo's "Celebrity Poker Showdown," the Travel Channel's "World Poker Tour," and ESPN's coverage of the World Series of Poker. Also helping fuel the boom were the rags-to-riches stories of nonprofessional players Chris Moneymaker and Greg Raymer, both of whom won the World Series of Poker's no-limit Texas hold'em world championship.

Bluff seeks to feed young players' dreams — wealth and fame beyond imagination — by focusing more on poker personalities and lifestyle and less on strategy. It's that creativity that publisher Eric Morris credits with the magazine's impressive growth in popularity in just 12 months, now with a self-reported circulation of 250,000. DANIEL YEE (AP)

Crafting a necktie becomes mechanical at art-science show

It's easy to feel inferior to machines: They can calculate brain-numbing mathematical complexities in seconds, outwit the world's best chess players and work efficiently without sleep or food.

But take comfort, humans — when it comes to tying a necktie, we're still No. 1.

"Sir Isaac's Loft: Where Art and Physics Collide," opened Friday at Philadelphia's Franklin Institute. The exhibit examines the connections between art and science, and features a gizmo called the "Why Knot," a kinetic sculpture that uses 10 motors to operate a series of pulleys, levers, optical sensors and other parts that can tie and untie a four-in-hand knot. ("Why Knot" doesn't do Windsors.)

It takes about nine minutes and 350 distinct moves for the machine — which measures roughly 3 feet by 2 feet by 3 feet — to complete its task. Though that's pretty pokey compared to human hands, it's no small feat for "Why Knot," which claps for itself when it's finished.

"This is about introducing people to mechanical engineering and getting them interested," said Seth Goldstein, 65, a retired mechanical engineer who built the machine in his Laurel, Md., basement; colleague Randall Pursley wrote the computer code.

"It's the wonder of engineering and the joy of creating something that does something," Goldstein said.

This is the second version; the "Why Knot" had to be made tougher for a museum setting, where it could be crafting its cravat 30 times a day. Style mavens may scoff, but the machine uses only polyester ties because they're more durable and less slippery.

The exhibit also features Franklin Institute favorites such as a giant lever, big gyroscopes and plenty of pulley contraptions. But the work of 15 artists takes a fresh approach by showing science principles in a different way.

"What we hope [visitors] will come away with is that science is beautiful, or can be," said Mike Levad, the exhibit's developer.

Besides Goldstein's contraption, there's a triple pendulum with sculptures of acrobatic flying figures that dip and dive in seemingly chaotic patterns, a painting created by attaching a paint sprayer to the car of a spinning Scrambler amusement park ride and X-ray images of items from a Ducati motorcycle to a pineapple.

Goldstein was inspired as a child after taking a tour of the Hershey chocolate plant and watching the automated process of wrapping paper around the candy bars. As he was mulling potential post-retirement pursuits, his wife, Paula Stone, conceived the idea for "Why Knot."

"She came up with it out of a clear blue sky," he said. "I gave it about four milliseconds of thought before replying, 'That's it!'"

✱ Elie Saab's specialty: sleek, shiny and sexy

"I'M REMINDED OF WHEN I WAS a little girl and my glamorous aunts would be s wishing around the place in beautiful gowns," said stylist Pat Field after Lebanese designer Elie Saab's July 8 show.

Don't kid yourself—there are no neat little tweed suits here. Saab is the master of cocktail and eveningwear, the man who whips up a dress, fitted within an inch of its life, so that his clients know they can make an unforgettable entrance.

A fox wrap falling from the shoulders is luxe and lovely, a guimpe-front dress entirely covered in dull metallic sequins is liquid mercury you can wear, and the draping tiers on a blush beige beaded tulle dress are a spectacular exercise in clothing construction.

And of course there's the bride, or in this case two, both played by Tiiu Kiuk, who opened and closed the show (the dresses are relatively traditional, in a sexy way, but the crystal-beaded trailing veils were awesome).

So much detail and ornament. What stops it from becoming vulgar? It's a mixture of two things: Saab's sense of editing, and his eye for a silhouette with a glove-like fit.

"Magnifique!" clients cooed to each other as they made their way out into the daylight. One woman with an unnerving expression of permanent surprise scalped onto her face had quite possibly the biggest helmet of hair ever seen outside of a science fiction movie. However, big hair horrors aside, Saab's client line-up is surely unimaginable to smaller houses.

FOX TROT: A guimpe-front dress looks all the better with a fuzzy wrap.

TO KNOW A VEIL: Tiiu Kiuk is robo-bride, a blushing picture of marital bliss. And she's shiny.

PURPLE REIGNS: (Left) All that glitters isn't gold, as this dress suggests.

CIRCLING SAND: Shimmering touches enliven a pale fabric.

BLUE PERIOD: Add some sequins for extra flair.

Diamond Darling

One season they're chunky chronographs, the next they're dainty charm bracelets ... wouldn't it be nice if there were timepieces that felt, well, timeless? Coupling the classic appeal of diamonds with cutting-edge technology, Tag Heuer's Diamond Fiction watch is just that. Equal parts elegant and avant-garde, the watch features a luxe red satin band dripping with 879 Top Wesselton diamonds. Though it's not yet slated for mass production, we're already obsessed. Stay tuned for pricing and purchasing information.

Famous Eyes for the Non-Celebrity Body

It's not every day you get to look glamorous, mysterious and retro all at once. But now it can be, thanks to these Supa Dupa sunglasses from Dita. Available in black, burgundy and tortoiseshell, these leaders of the oversized pack will turn heads no matter where you are. Whether you're lounging on the beach, or simply sauntering down the street, these shades are sure to leave people wondering if they've just seen a celebrity. $165; see www.dita.com for retail locations.

These women, used to first-row seating, don't mind a fifth row perch to take in what they'll be wearing some evening in the coming months.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may have trouble finding someone who will carry out your orders according to your specifications or standards.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't make hasty judgments, particularly where your own friends are concerned. Give those closest to you the benefit of the doubt.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You are not likely to be as cold and controlling as others think you are. You can demonstrate your natural warmth on numerous occasions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Though you're not usually one to boast, you'll have little excuse for keeping an accomplishment to yourself. Share your satisfaction.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Mind your manners — especially when someone ignites your temper. It is essential that you channel your anger into something productive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) This is a good day to focus on self-improvement of any kind. What you do on the inside will be reflected on the outside.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're likely to be a worrier — and there's nothing anyone can say to ease your anxiety. Internal rhythms may be working against you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Your critical powers are keen. You can use them well to point out what must be studied if improvement is to follow.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You may be getting a little too cerebral and intellectual for your own good. Let your instincts and emotions have a turn.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Though you may think that a continual onslaught will win the day, you are likely to get better results through reason, diplomacy and tact.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't let your determination undermine your generosity — which is a far more valuable asset.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Not everyone will be able to live up to your hefty expectations. Those who do, however, are likely to remain close for some time.
